

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In order to enhance solidity and rigidity of structural components of at least two partial shells, flanges of the partial shells are connected to one another by conducting a flanging process while inserting a resistant adhesive. The inventive method is particularly suitable for long support components such as engine mountings.